Benth of the Rev. Dr. Robert Baird, D. D.

The Rev. Robert Baird, D. D., the author. preacher, linguist, traveler, and manager of various Christian and charitable enterprises, died at his residence, in Yonkers, on Sanday morning, having been suddenly prostrated with hemorrhage of the lungs but a few days previous.

Dr. Baird was born of Scotch parents, in Fayette at Washington and Jefferson Colleges, graduating at the latter in the year 1818. After spending a year as principal of a school in Bellefont, where he became a frequent contributor to the newspapers, he intered the Theological Seminary at Princeton, where he studied three years, and officiated one year as teacher in the College. In 1822, he took charge of an Academy in Princeton, a position he charge of an Academy in Princeton, a position he year as teacher in the College. In 1822, he took charge of an Academy in Princeton, a position he held for five years, preaching occasionally. In 1827, he commenced what he regarded as the great mission of his life, the extension of Protestantism and the evangelization of the world, in connection with the benevolent and Christian institutions of the age. At his suggestion, every destitute family in New-Jersey was supplied with a copy of the Bible. In 1829, he became agent of the American Sanday. 1829, he became agent of the American Sunday- purposes. School Union, traveling and holding meetings for five years in all parts of the country, increasing the influence and adding vastly to the funds of the Society. In 1835 he visited Europe, with a view to reviving the Protestant faith where it was weak, and promoting the cause of temperance and morality. Ho was a very industrious man, as the following works from his ready and graceful pen plainly attest: "View of the Valley of the Mississippi;" "History of the Temperance Societies" (translated into five lenguages); "A View of the Valley of the Mississippi;" "Protestantism in Italy;" ties" (translated into five languages); "A View of Religion in America;" "Protestantism in Italy;"
"The Christian Retrospect and Register;" "History of the Albigenses, Waldenses, and Vaudois;"
"Visit to Northern Europe," &c. Dr. Baird was Secretary and Agent of the American and Foreign Christian Union for several years, in which capacity be was a frequent contributor to various journals. At the coming anniversaries he will be greatly missed. His amiable deportment, his good common gentleman, of fine attainments and fair ability. If Washington. be sometimes put down the brakes upon the car of progress with too much force, these who questioned his judgment in such matters never doubted the purity of his motives.
